

Network of government library and information specialists

NGLIS discussion forum on digital continuity - Wednesday 20th January

Mark Merifield of The National Archives will talk to NGLIS members about how their Digital Continuity project is helping government and the wider public sector to manage its digital information. They are developing a service comprising guidance and a framework of technical tools, services and consultancy to help organisations ensure they can use digital information in the way they need to, over time and through change. Mark will introduce us to some of the actions that all organisations need to consider taking in order to protect their electronic information.

Date: Wednesday 20th January

Time: 2.30 for 3pm

Venue: Department for Work and Pensions, Adelphi, 1-11 John Adam Street, (near the Strand), London WC2N 6HT

Nearest tubes: Embankment, Charing Cross and Covent Garden

Tea and coffee will be served and we will move to a nearby pub afterwards.

Contact Laura Higgins Laura.Higgins@defra.gsi.gov.uk to book